

Walk-in Replacement Bulletin

Due to the recent floods in Tennessee, many area restaurants have had their foodservice equipment damaged or destroyed. Walk-in coolers and freezers are no exception and should be carefully inspected.

Floodwater Hazards

Potential hazards exist if floodwater comes in contact with walk-in walls or mechanical systems. Walls and other systems immersed in water may be susceptible to mold formation which could introduce potential food safety hazards into the restaurant and food chain. Such mold formation may be hidden between the exterior surface and the interior insulation, making it virtually impossible to detect by visual inspection. In addition, electrical components and circuits exposed to floodwaters may create unsafe conditions if returned to service. Immediate and complete replacement is recommended for any walk-in unit and all refrigeration systems which have been immersed in, or subject to floodwaters.

Kolpak offers a Tennessee Flood Recovery Program that includes:

- Site visit by Kolpak personnel to confirm field measurements of damaged walk-ins
- Expedited quote turn around
- Expedited drawing process
- Provide previously approved drawings for Kolpak walk-ins (provide Kolpak serial number)
- Receive priority scheduling of order
- Dedicated carrier shipments with expedited delivery
- Installation by approved Kolpak installers
- Turnkey quoting available (removal and installs)

The good news is that purchasing a new walk-in means you can take advantage of new energy-saving features. New Kolpak walk-in units offer enhanced insulating properties in the walls and ceilings along with more efficient electrical components and advanced alarm systems further improve restaurant operations by reducing energy costs.
